

The Population and Community Development Association in Bangkok Announces 2008 Awardees of the Rosenfield Internships

The Population and Community Development Association (PDA) in Bangkok, Thailand, has announced the recipients of the 2008 Rosenfield Internships, awarding two of the three positions to Mailman School students.

The summer 2008 interns are:

- Radha Duggal, a Mailman School student in the Department of Sociomedical Sciences
- Michelle Suwannukul, a Mailman School student in the Department of Epidemiology
- Amanda Toubali, a student at the School of International and Public Affairs

The Rosenfield Internship Program, which was established in 2007 and offers fully-funded internships at PDA to selected graduate students, honors Allan Rosenfield, MD, dean of the Mailman School, for his influential and prominent contributions to Thailand's public health challenges, particularly in the area of family planning and reproductive health.

Now in its second year, the Program attracts a highly qualified applicant pool of graduate students from Columbia's Schools of Public Health, International and Public Affairs, Medicine, Nursing, and Social Work. In both years, the quality of the applicants has resulted in an increase in the number of Rosenfield interns from two to three.
