

Robert Ogden Named 2008 Glenda Garvey Teaching Academy Fellow

Nine new fellows have been appointed to the Glenda Garvey Teaching Academy this year, joining the current group of 20 premier educators from Columbia University Medical Center's (CUMC) medical, nursing, public health, and dental schools. The Mailman School is pleased to announce that Robert Ogden, PhD, associate professor of Biostatistics (in Psychiatry), has been named as a member of the 2008 class.

Appointment as a Garvey Fellow is one of CUMC's most prestigious honors. The fellowships reward and improve teaching by identifying faculty who will maintain the highest standards in teaching skills, dedication, and commitment, and who will study and identify ways to improve our educational mission.

The newest members were chosen by current fellows through a peer-review process that included evaluation of each applicant's educational portfolio. The new fellows are:

Rita Charon, MD, PhD, College of Physicians & Surgeons
Wendy Chung, MD, PhD, College of Physicians & Surgeons
Janis Cutler, MD, College of Physicians & Surgeons
Michael Devlin, MD, College of Physicians & Surgeons
Rita Marie John, DNP, School of Nursing
Pablo Joo, MD, College of Physicians & Surgeons
Letty Moss-Salentijn, DDS, PhD, College of Dental Medicine
Robert Ogden, PhD, Mailman School of Public Health
Rini Ratan, MD, College of Physicians & Surgeons